Captive!

Put Magic in Your Message and a Fortune in Your Future

Featuring
Deepak Chopra, Ran Zilca, Suzi Pomerantz,
Marsha Wright, Dan Janal, and Jim Stovall

If you are like many people in our fast-paced, 21st century world, you are scrambling just to complete your daily “to-do” list: Pack lunches, kids to school, business lunch meeting, marketing presentation, make dinner, do the dishes, kids to bed...the list never ends! You may feel like there is no time to focus your attention on trying to improve your situation, and besides, who would listen to you if you tried?

Ready, Aim, Captivate! brings together experts, entrepreneurs, and authorities on how to take your individual message and use it to reach out to others, change lives, and captivate hearts. These professionals have started successful companies, written best-selling books, and championed multimillion dollar events, but still—at their core—they are just like you. They were once someone in a bookstore reading the introduction to a book they hoped would teach them how to get where they wanted to go. They had to learn—some of them, the hard way—how to balance success at work while maintaining happiness at home. You are not alone.

Each of us has a message to share with the world. Some people were born with obvious gifts such as an ability to sing, dance, play an instrument or professional sport, or lead businesses, schools, and churches to growth and success. Others have known since they were children that they wanted to be a firefighter, a cook, a teacher, or a nurse. You may be thinking, But what about me? I'm just a regular person with a passion for something, but I have no idea how to put it to work to help anyone.

Sit down and be inspired by this collection of interviews. Listen to each contributor as they speak of their stories of hardship and frustration, and how they came to claiming a life that abounds in purpose and passion—a life that lets them share their incredible message with the world. Allow them to remind you that wherever you are right now is the perfect place to start moving toward the goal of a fulfilled life so that others can begin to be changed by your unique message.

Embark on a journey in the coming pages that will help you find your gift, explore your talents, and teach you to touch lives with your passion and your purpose. Allow them to show you what it takes to make your message magical.

Ready, Aim, Captivate! is a priceless resource. Such an amazing group of trusted professionals has come together in this book with one common purpose. Prepare to be captivated!

About Expert Insights Publishing

Marsha Wright

London, United Kingdom

Marsha Wright is a TV business expert, successful serial-entrepreneur and mentor. From her home in Spain, she presides over an impressive empire of international businesses with interests in high-end consultancy, mentoring and training, publishing, production, media, software, and business services.*

She's known as a Quantum Leap Strategist, and works closely with high-flying business owners and c-level managers to improve profits, productivity, and implement change that gets significant results. She says, "If we're honest, nobody wants to get 'to the next level'. Who wants to be 10% or 20% better than they are? No one, that's who! People who are serious aren't thinking about what's at the end of their nose. They are thinking about the Quantum Leap, and that's when they come to me and my consulting firm Dew Point IEMC."

Marsha, who is a highly sought after international speaker, presenter, columnist, and author was a school drop out with no real qualifications to speak of. Sexually abused as a young girl, she spent most of her teen years in group homes. She is an inspiring rags to riches story. Attractive, outspoken, and a force to be reckoned with, she's someone you want in your corner for sure.

Marsha and her husband Simon Wright started their journey to financial freedom in 1998. Since then, she's had a number one show on iTunes, and has directly mentored over 1,000 business owners, influenced and inspired millions on TV, through radio, and in national and local newspaper and magazine spreads.

I: Marsha, share a little bit about the heart and core of your message.

MW: What I'm really about is the idea that everybody can do something that changes this world. Everybody has the ability within them, that special diamond, that special thing that's in them and no one else, to be a magnificent human being, and to achieve incomparable levels of excellence.

I feel that so many people want to be able to do that, but unfortunately they get bogged down with the urgencies of the day. Days become weeks, and then months and years pass by. Without noticing, people find they are living a life that's less than the one they envisioned those many years ago.

Reality is that most people are plagued by the "I don't know how." They don't know how to apply what they need to do, and success can feel near and far at the same time. I think with the right focus and adjustments, everyone who wants to do it can tap into that amazing magnificence. It takes action. I really feel that's the gap that I try to fill, to really help people to identify their Quantum Leap, especially in the element of business and refining what they can do that is so special and so amazing that it can help them become irreplaceable to their clients.

I: Could you share a little bit about your history and some of the really unique challenges that you ran into?

MW: Really and truly, people look at who I am today and what I have accomplished today, and that all looks glitzy and glittery, but where was everybody when it really all got started?

I come from a single parent household. My dad was incarcerated when I was five-years-old. My mom was trying to raise us and do the best that she could, but it was tough.

Some of the lowest points of my life were definitely feeling that I couldn't control what was happening to me. I had numerous instances of being sexually abused. I was in and out of children's group homes from age 12, and had been attacked and nearly killed by gangs on several occasions. I was kicked out of schools. I had so much bad stuff happening to me, some of which I brought on myself.

There were so many things against me to be able to even become who I am today. It's just amazing to me, and I thank God for the ability to become who I am and tap into who I was meant to be. Other challenges have run the gamut from financial hardships, a couple of business failures, and with getting the right team around me. I'm a fighter and really driven. Like they say, "You can't keep a good woman down."

I: Tell us a little bit about what that looks like today, and how you've been able to develop this powerful platform.

MW: This is what's really amazing. I have many businesses, but the one that I love the most is working with people in my mentoring and training business Tycoon Inc., and my high-end consultancy business Dew Point IEMC. The reason I love it is because I get to help people switch on that light in their head that says, "Ah-ha! That's how you do it!"

Ready, Aim, Captivate!_____

The most important and easiest way for you to add to your successes and make a big impact is to develop a platform where people can watch you from afar, suss you out, and buy into your skill and expertise. Personally, and for hundreds of others who have followed in my footsteps, my platform was becoming more well-known, and having more established and influential people calling me an expert. I realized that when these people classed me as an expert, my target market flocked to me. I taught them what I knew, and all of a sudden, I was making a lot more money. I was securing engagements left and right.

It's all about building the platform that helps you to be seen by the right people all the time, not focusing on pandering to the wrong audiences. The right people need to know that you're there. There's no point in being the best-kept secret. Don't think about things that are not great about you. Let's think about things that are great about you and let's let the world know those things to help you get the platform that you need to significantly improve your results. You want people to look at you and say, "This person has the knowledge to help me move forward, solve my problem, or open doors for me."

I: What are the most critical ingredients to make a message magical?

MW: The thing that really resonates for me with this question is, above all else, there is one single ingredient to be able to guarantee your success.

The ingredient has several components, and it's comprised of different things that make it work. There are loads of things you can do underneath it, but there is one principle thing that you must absolutely do. You have to become worth knowing. It is the most powerful thing that you can do, because nobody will listen to you if you are not clearly the best solution to his or her problem.

I always say that the critical thing that you can do is learn how to solve problems, because you'll never run out of business ideas, and you'll never stop increasing your profits if you can solve problems. You have to become worth knowing. The way to become worth knowing is that you have to really hit your market where they are. You have to solve something for them, and you just have to make yourself somebody worth listening to. But authentically have something useful to say. Keep improving that message you are your knowledge. You can't be focused on meeting your customers where you are at. You have to hit your customers where they are at.

Don't just be interested in money. If you're passionate enough and you solve enough problems, you'll make money. You don't have to focus on it.

I: How did you come about deciding to do the great work you do?

MW: For me, it was a step-by-step process. I started doing my radio show, and it was going really, really well. I had all these thousands of listeners. I never wanted to do training courses or seminars. It wasn't what I aimed to do.

My market wanted more time with me than they could get from my radio show. What they wanted was consultancy time. They wanted mentorship. When I was going out and speaking to hundreds of people and teaching, people just wanted more of what I had to say. That goes back to the whole point I made about "become worth knowing." The more you're worth knowing the more that you share, and the more you put out there, the more people will want. My mission in life is so much bigger than just me, and I'm so glad to have the opportunity to be able to share my wisdom, be an entrepreneur whose enterprises make a magnificent difference, and share my pearls of wisdom along the way. Just as we do in The Wright Strategic Alliance—we make such a difference. It's phenomenal to watch. It's from what I know to be effective. It's an honor to have the chance to make that level of impact.

Make Your Message Magical:

If you're not an expert, you have to become one. If you are one already, you need a platform. You have to leverage to get your word out there. Get credible endorsements. Define and redefine yourself in the eyes of what your clients need and what they want. Creating products and services and growing your business will never be difficult if you do that.

Most of our lives we're trying to "figure it out." You need very successful mentors, who are ahead of you and can show you the short cuts. You may decide you want my help. I could give you a piece of advice today and you'll run with it, and achieve amazing results. Bottom line, you're always going to need people who are willing to help you as you progress.

Also read like crazy on your subject matter. Don't make excuses for being lackadaisical in your education. Make practical use of that knowledge so it turns into experience. Stay on the cutting edge of your industry so people do define and see you as being current, because nobody wants somebody who's giving them strategies from five years ago. Stay on the cutting edge, redefine yourself, become an expert, attract great people into your team, and that includes attracting really good mentors into your life. If you get stuck, find me on Twitter @MarshaWright or www.MarshaWright.com. See you at the top!
